

Searching for a Dream

(c) 2011 Bill Jacobson - bill@billjacobson.us

He was young, had only one thing on his mind Playing baseball, all the time
He was always hitting home runs down the line
He had dreams that would always make him shine

Now, he's searching for a dream he left behind
Searching for a dream lost in his mind
a dream that was always his guide
a dream he carried deep inside

In the years tween playing baseball, and growing up instead left him longing for something he could not let back in he's not playing for the hometown team, he's working for his kin Left him wondering what his coach had said,
"son you just don't fit in"

Now, he's searching for a dream he left behind
Searching for a dream lost in his mind
a dream that was always his guide
a dream he carried deep inside

It might seem like he'll never get the chance to play again but he kept right on dreaming a dream inside of him his dream was never over, it started back up within Cause his grandson hit a home run his baseball dreams don't end

He's not searching for a dream he left behind he's not searching for a dream lost in his mind he's living a new dream for this time it's the dream he carried deep inside like dream we all carry deep inside
